Travers and Herreshoff Likely Even to Play on Tourney Links Any Day Now.

BRITON DISCUSSES PLANS

Secretary of Club at Sandwich Says They Probably Will Stay in South.

Special Correspondence to Tak Sex. SANDWICH BAY, England, March 14 .-The probable practice schedule of Jerome D. Travers, amateur golf champlon of the United States, and Fred Herreshoff, who s travelling with him, was discussed to day by Ryder Richardson, the genial honprable secretary of the Royal St. George's Golf Club, over whose trying course at Sandwich Bay on the east coast of Kent the British amateur championship is to be played for a few weeks hence.

It is assumed in golfing circles here that Travers and Herreshoff will get right down to practice before the end of this month, and Mr. Richardson will not be surprised to see the American amateur surprised to see the American amateur champion turn up any day with a keen desire to play a found or two over the famous sand hills among which the great international contest is to be fougth out.

"The, amateur golf championship tournament will begin at Sandwich on Monday, May 18, if necessary," says Mr. Richardson; "otherwise on Tuesday, May 19. The draw will take place on Wednesday of the previous week May 13. The Friday following the amateur champion-ship draw, the St. George's Champion Grand Challenge Cup, which is open to sil amateurs, will be played for over the same course. The player making the best aggregate score of two rounds of the links will receive a silver replica of the cup of the value of twenty guineas, or half a guinea."

If they care to travel so far north as Muirfield, places may be found for both Travers and Fred Herreshoff on a team being got up for a match on April 25 against the picked team of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. But the expectation here is that all the visiting amateurs from the United States and from Canada will not wander far from the southern counties of England, where they will find the balmy spring weather more conducive for rounding into top form than Scotland in April would be.

more conducive for rounding into top form than Scotland in April would be. American goifers planning an attack upon the British open championship will find that the scheme under which it has been held for the past seven years has been altered considerably. The managing clubs, having had under consideration for time the necessity for a change in the conditions of the open championship, formulated a scheme that has been submitted successfully to the committee of the Professional Golfers Association, which has resolved the following: "That qualifying rounds be "That qualifying rounds be held on Cardiff City. 9 Brighton & Hove. 0 courses other than the championship The replayed fourth round Scottish cup
